It was during the summer, I was 18, and at the time the resorts were very different from what they are now. There was only Club Med, in what is now old part of town. It was a two hour ferry ride from Cancun. I think there was one other resort. I was with my wife and we stayed in the lagoon resort, I forget the name. It was huge with little cement block cabins all over. The problem was that it was at the end of the season, which for us meant it was hot and sticky. We decided to leave the next morning and go for a late afternoon snorkel. It was a beautiful day, very serene. The water was crystal clear and we saw lots of dolphins and about a dozen stingrays. That night we were fed a barbeque dinner, which was quite a treat at the end of a long day. When we returned the following morning for breakfast, we were shocked to find that they had completely rebuilt the resort. They had built new restaurants, new pools, and new bungalows. The food was great, the service was great, and the rooms were wonderful. We decided to stay, and to leave our names on the list for the fall. The following year we came back again with our parents, and we each stayed in one of the newly built cabins. This time we wanted to stay in the lagoon, and we ended up staying at the new Xanadu resort. This was a very nice resort, with gorgeous grounds, and excellent service. It was a bit less posh than Club Med, but still quite nice. The cabins were nice, and the proximity to the beach was great. We tried to return again, but we got back just in time for the hurricane season, and we didn't want to deal with that. When we got back the next year, we wanted to stay at the resort closest to the airport, and we chose the old Cabo Mar hotel. This was much more basic than the Xanadu, but the grounds and the service were great. We thought we'd return, but the next year our return flight was delayed, and we didn't want to wait until the fall again. We decided to visit Club Med, which was about a 45 minute drive from the old Cabo Mar. We decided to stay at the new Cabo Mar, and we thought we'd stay at the Club Med. When we got there, we were told that the hotel no longer had a pool 82157476af
